THE OLDEST MOST SUCCESSFUL LEGAL REFORM GROUP IN THE WORLD

wonders why when you enter a subway, airport, or any public area, you will see signs advising "If you see something say something". Yet when you enter a courthouse, the attitude is if you see something shut up or we will shut you up. As court watchers for more than 15 years without pay or financial reimbursement, we have observed many incidents of corruption, ineptness, partisanship, prejudice and stupidity. When we report these incidents to the authorities, there is an attitude such as it's not my job, prove it or don't bother me, I'm busy. If the newspapers or radio publicize an incident they and the complainant run the risk of litigation. Recently we reported several indications of corruption by U.S. trustees to Ms. Diana G. Adams, U.S. Trustee, Department of Justice. A trustee under her supervision admitted in sworn testimony that he had nearly one million dollars in cash and liquid assets used to purchase and sell property acquired through brokers, banks, business associates and trustees from estates administered by his associates. Adams' reply in so many words was "prove it". If we are right about these trustees and their associates, doesn't Ms. Adams have a duty to investigate?

We all pray that our new president, a lawyer, does the right things to pull this country out of its problems.

Nancy Pelosi's (Esq.) district includes StarKist Tuna, who is a major contributor to Pelosi. Her husband owns $17 million of their stock. When the minimum wage went from $5.15 to $7.25, they excluded StarKist Tuna's Samoan workforce. The recently passed bailout bill added a $33 million economic development credit for StarKist employees. She calls the President corrupt. (Snopes.com)
